NCVO warns of ‘even more pressure on charities’ in 2017

Charities should expect to see income from donations and government grants continue to be squeezed while demand increases, NCVO has warned in its annual review of the operating environment. The Road Ahead: A review of the voluntary sector’s operating environment, says the combined effect of decreased public funding and pressures on donations “will put even more pressure on charities and their volunteers, especially the smaller ones that have been struggling for a long time already”.

Councils funding freeze ‘means cuts to many essential services’

A senior Conservative peer has warned that councils will need to slash a range of essential services after ministers released a funding settlement for councils that offered no additional money during 2017/18. Gary Porter, who chairs the Local Government Association, said authorities would have to cut back on filling potholes, collecting waste, maintaining parks and running children’s centres and libraries in order to plug growing funding gaps. He expressed “huge disappointment” about the decision not to increase funding, warning that while councils would impose tax rises, the money would not be enough to prevent services, including social care, from being hit.

Statistics watchdog warns government over homelessness figures

The UK Statistics Authority has told the Department for Communities and Local Government to stop using potentially misleading figures for homelessness, and said it would monitor its future statements on the issue. The intervention came after DCLG claimed that homelessness was at less than half its 2003 peak. The briefings did not make clear that this only referred to the statutory definition of homelessness - a relatively narrow meaning which only includes people local authorities are obliged to assist - and does not take into account those given assistance under homelessness prevention and relief schemes.

New Charities Bill

The Law Commission will publish a draft charities bill in the summer, containing its proposals for the reform of charity law, a government spokesman has confirmed. The commission has proposed a number of technical changes to charity law, governing issues including how Royal Charter charities change their objects, as well as guidance for charities to change their purposes, rules governing mergers, rules governing charity names, and certain powers of the Charity Tribunal.
Normal procedure for the Law Commission, once it has completed a review of law, is to put forward a draft bill. These bills are considered by government for submission to Parliament, with most but not all being taken forward in some form.

Welfare Benefits Project

The Welfare Benefits Project received funding from 1st April 2016 from the Hastings and Rother Clinical Commissioning Group (CCG) and Eastbourne, Hailsham and Seaford CCG to address health inequalities in these areas. In the last 9 months project achieved the following: More than 7,300 people received benefits advice; Over £4.8 million in annualised benefit income and one off claims was realised for clients; In the first three months of the new debt service 71 clients were supported, managing over 350 debts totaling £595,000. For more information please view the Eastbourne, Hailsham and Seaford CCG report and the Hastings and Rother CCG report.

How Charities Work- New Website Launched

National Council for Voluntary Organisations (NCVO) has launched a new website, which helps explain how charities work for the general public. If you have any feedback or ideas for the site, they’d love to hear them. Please contact them either at ncvo@ncvo.org.uk or on 020 7713 6161.

Safe Space Sussex

A new website Safe Space Sussex has been developed for all victims and witnesses of crime in Sussex. It offers direct access to help and support through an online directory of local specialist services. The site also provides information about different types of crime and what happens at each stage of the criminal justice system, helping to ‘demystify’ the process for people when they may be at their most vulnerable.

Social Value Act to be Reviewed

The Minister for Civil Society has announced that there will be another review of the Social Value Act. Although this legislation should provide many opportunities for communities, most public sector organisations don’t really understand it. Further details. Also see NCVO’s response.

Smaller charities feel the squeeze

If the £72bn total annual income of the charity sector in England and Wales was divided equally among the 166,000 organisations on the charity register, each would bring in £433,735 a year. But the combined income of the top 100 fundraising charities alone reached £9.5bn in 2015, according to the Centre for Charitable Giving and Philanthropy at Cass Business School. So although many charities are generating far more than the mean average, the vast majority are surviving on much less. About 97 per cent of charities operate on less than a £1m a year, according to the Small Charities Coalition, but much of the attention of the public, the media and even the sector itself is focused on the 3 per cent that have bigger incomes.
Slight recovery in charity sector's reputation, says YouGov

47 per cent of the public now think of the charity sector as "good" or "very good" - up from 41 per cent last year, according to YouGov polling. The proportion saying the charity sector was "bad" or "very bad" has fallen from 20 per cent in 2016 to 16 per cent of those polled.

NSPCC calls for investigation into ‘rogue’ charity bag collectors

The NSPCC and Clothes Aid have written to the Fundraising Regulator calling for an investigation into unlicensed charity bag collections. Both the NSPCC and its charity bag collection agency Clothes Aid have written separately to the Fundraising Regulator calling for an investigation into unlicensed charity bag collections.

NAVCA Chief Officers Survey

NAVCA has published the findings of our 2016 survey of Chief Officers, an annual survey carried out to gauge the views of NAVCA members on current policy issues. Key findings from the survey: include 70 per cent experiencing an increase in demand for local infrastructure services.

Over 10,000 charities miss deadline to file with regulator

Are your accounts up to date? Charities have up to 10 months from their financial year end to file information with the Charity Commission. Almost half of all charities have a financial year end of 31 March, which means accounts should have been filed by 31 January. Failure to file on time is a criminal offence and charities risk enforcement action. Read the full article here.

Getting Involved at NHS England

Blood pressure awareness

With only half the adult population knowing their blood pressure, PHE is encouraging all adults over the age of 40 to get it tested as part of the NHS Health Check, a simple measure that could save their life. If found to be at risk, high blood pressure can be managed and reduced by making simple lifestyle changes. http://bit.ly/2mvQWTR

Households below the Minimum Income Standard

The Joseph Rowntree Foundation has published a report into households below the Minimum Income Standard, charting changes from 2008-09 to 2014-15. The Minimum Income Standard (MIS) is a benchmark of adequate income based on what the public think people need for a minimum acceptable living standard in the UK. This analysis monitors changes in the number of people in households with incomes below MIS, and the number below 75% of MIS, an indicator of poverty. http://bit.ly/2m1ocEK
10 charts that show why the NHS is in trouble

The NHS faces unrelenting pressure despite funding rising. The sheer scale of the NHS can take the breath away. Every 24 hours it sees one million patients, and with 1.7 million staff it's the fifth biggest employer in the world.  http://bbc.in/2m1sYCh

Government produces guidance on volunteering in public services

The government has published extensive guidance to help public sector commissioners embed volunteering and social action in public services. The six pieces of guidance, published by Office for Civil Society, are the result of a project conducted last year with the New Economics Foundation. The reports provide guidance on making the case for greater social action in the public sector, and on how public sector bodies can commission and create conditions to encourage more social action. http://bit.ly/2mzhUKr

Government seeks new Crown Representative for the voluntary sector

The government has begun recruiting for a new Crown Representative for the Voluntary, Community and Social Enterprise Sector. Crown representatives manage the procurement relationship between government and suppliers. In most cases the job of the crown representative is to get the best deal for the government, however the VCSE crown representative role is more focused on ensuring the relationship works effectively. The government has begun advertising for a new Crown Representative for the charity sector seeking to replace the former representative Michael O’Toole who stepped down from the position in September 2014. According to the job description on gov.uk website, Crown Representatives “help the government act as a single customer” and work “across departments to ensure a single and strategic view of the government’s needs is communicated to the market, identify areas for cost savings and act as a point of focus for cross-cutting issues”.
